Strong Explains Clothing Drive Here on April 20

Plans for the clothing drive to be held here Friday, April 20 for the destitute in the war-torn countries were outlined by Edwin Strong, chairman of the Rotary Committee, at the luncheon-meeting of the Rotary Club held Wednesday.

Trucks, truck drivers, paper cartons and twine are needed for packing the clothing preparatory to shipping it to New York.

School children will collect the clothing from the homes, deposit the clothing on a street corner and trucks will pick it up and take it to the municipal auditorium.

Boy Scouts will be at the auditorium to unload the trucks and Mrs. Eugene O'Connell will head a committee to assist in sorting the clothing. Members of the local service clubs also will help.

Mr. Strong paid tribute to the work of Raymond A. Rignall, who is general chairman of the drive. The planning committee is composed of members of the Lions, Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs.

The clothing most urgently needed are infants' garments, men's and boys' garments, overcoats, topcoats, suits, jackets, shirts and all types of work clothes, women's and girls' garments, bedding and shoes.

Next Wednesday, the Lions Club will meet with Rotary when Col. Joe Kelly, commanding officer of Stewart Field, will be the guest speaker. The colonel has an important message and a record attendance is expected. Members of the Kiwanis Club are invited to attend.

A motion picture on Bolivia was shown following the luncheon.

Relief Is Speeded To Italian Areas

Distribution of relief supplies on a greatly extended scale is now in progress in 215 communes in six provinces in Central Italy, according to information received yesterday from the National War Fund.

The report was based upon a cablegram sent to American Relief for Italy, a War Fund member agency, by Myron C. Taylor, the President's personal representative to the Vatican.

Included in the supplies distributed to 649,000 victims in war-torn provinces were more than 200,000 garments, large quantities of milk, surgical instruments, first aid kits and medicine, the report stated.

Approximately 94 per cent of the relief supplies was contributed by War Relief Services, National Catholic Welfare Conference, a participating agency of American Relief for Italy, it was explained.

The area of distribution included the Cassino and Anzio battle zones, and also Sicily, Sardinia and Pantelleria. Distribution of the supplies over roads, in some instances destroyed or snow-covered, was made possible by transport provided by the Allied armies and the Allied Commission said the report.

Discharge Saves Him
New York, April 11 (AP)—Possession of an honorable discharge from the armed forces saved Michael Nannariello, 35-year-old proprietor of the Westchester Garage, Ardsley, N. Y., from a jail sentence today when he pleaded guilty in federal court to a charge of illegally possessing counterfeit gasoline ration coupons, representing 1,340 gallons of gasoline. Assistant U. S. Attorney John C. Hilley recommended a jail term of three months but Judge Murray Hubbert commented "I'm going to give a soldier a chance to get on his feet." He suspended sentence and placed Nannariello on probation for one year.

The early opera, supposedly founded on classical tragedy, became a mere excuse for brilliant court festivity.

Fur Trapping Yields $1,500,000 for Season

Albany, N. Y., April 11 (AP)—New York's fur trapping industry brought a trappers' take in the 1944-45 season of at least $1,500,000.

Officials of the State Conservation Department, figuring this as a normal four per cent return, said that in theory trapping is a $37,000,000-a-year business.

The state's production of nearly 500,000 pelts annually, the department said, is greater than the yearly total produced in Alaska, although the value is less. About 20,000 farm boys under 16 and 180,000 property owners who may trap on their own land without a license account for an increase of 20 to 50 per cent over this figure.

Greatest number of pelts annually is removed from the backs of about 335,000 unfortunate muskrats, bringing more than $750,000 to the state's licensed trappers. Most valuable single pelt is the beaver's, 500 skins bringing about $15,000 yearly.

Seasons for trapping most fur-bearing animals open in November and extend through March or April. The time depends on when the pelts are prime and are figured so as not to coincide with the animals' mating season. There is no closed season on fox.

Estimated totals of other important species taken in 1944-45, based on department records for past seasons, and their value, based on current market quotations, are:

Nearly 9,000 gray fox, $18,000; 28,000 red fox, $168,000; 10,500 mink, $178,000; 4,700 opossum, $4,000; 27,700 raccoons, $90,000; 46,000 skunks, $164,000; 9,200 weasel or ermine, $17,000; and 220 bobcats, $940.

Sales Training Program Here

Rosenbaum Company to Inaugurate Program Here Saturday

A sales training program designed to expedite and expand the distribution of merchandise in the Kingston and Newburgh market as soon as new postwar products become available will be inaugurated by the Rosenbaum Company at a special meeting of its sales organization Saturday, April 14 at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Based on the generally accepted hypothesis that distribution and consumption, rather than production, will constitute the nation's No. 1 economic problem in the postwar years, the plan has been conceived and developed by the National Association of Tobacco Distributors, of which the Rosenbaum Company is a member.

It is also predicated on an estimate of the U. S. Department of Commerce that the annual sales of the wholesale tobacco distributors should reach $2,965,000,000 within two years after the war, an increase of 49 per cent over the highest pre-war volume of the trade.

In the Kingston and Newburgh area, approximately 2,000 retail outlets are served by the wholesale tobacco trade, which distributes not only tobacco products and confectionery, but also an almost infinite variety of sundries, specialties and novelties.

According to Haskell Naigles and David O'Koon, the sales training and market extension program provides a comprehensive course of instruction for the sales intended to increase merchandising proficiency and develop top-notch sales power.

CANCER CAN BE CURED

In Europe and in the Pacific, we are achieving victory, because we are waging a total war in which all of our people participate with all they have got. It is taking us much longer to realize that we must apply the very same method to fight that other enemy of humanity, cancer. The mistaken idea that cancer is an incurable and hopeless disease is precisely the kind of appeasement that almost made us lose the war against the Nazis and the Japs, who were supposed to be invincible once.

Today, no one thinks that Hitler's and Hirohito's armies cannot be beaten, and that militarism cannot be destroyed, because everyone joined the fight and our enemies went down the road to certain defeat. Yet, although thousands of cancer cases are being cured every year thanks to recent scientific discoveries, a certain defeatist attitude on the subject of cancer has prevented us from furnishing the united all-out effort which has proved to be our irresistible weapon for victory. Cancer can be crushed and everything must be done to that end, because the dread disease is at present killing one out of every eight Americans and the death rate is still increasing.

Cancer is invading one out of every two American homes, just as the treacherous Japs and Nazis invaded the unprepared territories of the Pacific, Europe and Africa, and it is more deadly than a Japanese sniper bullet or a German robot bomb. The only way we are now defeating those is through superior modern, scientific weapons, bought with the money that you contribute in taxes and war bonds. The only way we can defeat cancer is a similarly total war, fought with the latest tools and methods of science, made available to all by your contributions to the nationwide drive to be conducted throughout the month of April by the American Cancer Society.

The second and equally important contribution that every man, woman and child owes to the common struggle against this internal enemy is to learn and teach others that cancer can be cured only if it is discovered in time. The death toll from cancer will be greatly reduced if everyone will go to a competent physician at least once a year for a thorough examination. And if coordinated cancer drives yield enough money to develop research on newly discovered injection and feeding methods, the weapons against the disease will become as efficient and victorious as B-29's and jet planes.

VICTORY GARDENS

This spring a good American's fancy should seriously turn to thoughts of his victory garden. The importance of home gardens in relation to our total food needs is great.

Based on present allocations, civilians will have to get along with about 10 to 15 per cent less commercially canned vegetables than a year ago. Half the canned vegetables available to United States civilians from now until the 1945 pack is ready will have to come from home-canned supplies.

If the 18½ million victory gardens that were planted in 1944 are planted again this year, chances for an increased yield will be good. At least two years' experience, for most gardeners, will result in better gardens.

They can be expected to choose better sites, prepare the ground more adequately, and take care of their gardens more thoroughly. They have undoubtedly learned by this time that most crops simply have to be thinned, and many have learned the art of replanting after an early harvest throughout the growing season.

The outlook for victory garden equipment is good this year. There is an ample supply of seed. Favorable weather last year in areas where vegetable seeds are grown commercially caused good yields. Edward G. Moore, manager of the government's victory garden program sponsored by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, reports that there will be little difficulty in obtaining fertilizers, and that supplies of insecticides are about the same as they were last year. The tool situation hasn't changed materially, but all

'These Days'

By George E. Sokolsky

LEAGUES OF NATIONS

Speaking two days after Pearl Harbor, Franklin D. Roosevelt said:

"We are now in the midst of a war not for conquest, not for vengeance, but for a world in which this nation . . . will be safe for our children."

Somewhat that statement echoes the words of Woodrow Wilson:

"There is a great voice of humanity abroad in the world just now which he who cannot hear is deaf. There is a great compulsion of the Common Conscience now in existence."

As we approach San Francisco, its proponents seem to ignore the fact that they are repeating the motions through which Woodrow Wilson, Lloyd George, and General Smuts painfully plodded as they drafted the Covenant of the League of Nations.

For the San Francisco meeting, we already have the Dumbarton Oaks proposals which have been endorsed by the Three Dominant Powers at Yalta. At the Moscow Conference in October, it was agreed by Soviet Russia, Great Britain, the United States and China "That they recognize the necessity of establishing at the earliest practicable date a general international organization, based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, and open to membership by all such states, large and small, for the maintenance of international peace and security."

In many respects, the new League, arranged at Dumbarton Oaks, takes on the forms of the old: A Council, an Assembly, an International Court of Justice, a Secretariat. Membership in the old League was open to any self-governing state; in the new League to all "peace-loving" states. There is one stronger difference that stands out. Under the old League, the Assembly, in which the smaller nations had their chance to speak, possessed this power:

"The Assembly may deal at its meetings with any matter within the sphere of action of the League or affecting the peace of the world."

Dumbarton Oaks revised this clause to read: "The General Assembly should not on its own initiative make recommendations on any matter relating to the maintenance of international peace and security which is being dealt with by the Security Council."

In a word, the old League recognized the equality of nations within the Covenant; the new League, according to Dumbarton Oaks, insists upon the inequality of nations; it enforces the domination of the Big Three who are in control of the Council and reduces the Assembly by the Charter, to a debating society. Of course, in the old League, each power, great or small, possessed the right to veto decisions, even affecting themselves. In the new League, only the Dominant Powers reserve that crucial privilege for themselves.

The weaknesses of the old League were recognized by Wilson, House, Lansing, General Smuts made a speech about them while the first draft of the covenant was being considered, in which he said:

" . . . We are ashamed that we have done no better, but one virtue at least we have. We know our limitations and we frankly admit them. What we offer is not the cornerstone of a new era but we hope it is the opening wedge that if pushed will open wide a door to better things. . . ."

With regard to Dumbarton Oaks, we are being propagandized as to the perfection of the proposals to such an extent that even friendly criticism and study of them is regarded as Goebbelsque. The fact is that the new League, as the old, lacks a Bill of Rights for nations and peoples and therefore is a mechanical device without a soul. Herbert Hoover and Arthur Vandenberg, both advocates of an international organization, have called attention to this serious lack. The genius of the American Constitution lies not in its structure, but in its Bill of Rights, in its statement of moral principles, and these have been guarded as sacred by the American people through the courts. Any machinery will work well if lubricated by moral principles. If San Francisco can supply that lack, any machinery it devises will work. Without it, the best machinery will collapse.

FATIGUE AND BENZEDRINE SULFATE

I have spoken before of two outstanding uses of benzedrine sulfate—amphetamine sulfate—in the treatment of alcoholism and also in the treatment of overweight. In both these diseases, as they really are diseases, the drug lessens the appetite for food or alcohol, yet gives the individual enough energy or "pep" to carry on his work. As a matter of fact benzedrine sulfate was first mentioned as being used by students preparing for examinations; it kept their minds clear for study and for the examinations by warding off fatigue.

The use of benzedrine sulfate in preventing fatigue in soldiers is described in an editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Dr. Nils Alwall in Scandinavian Medical Journal describes experiments with large groups of soldiers. These groups were thoroughly fatigued by two or three nights of marching and exercises during the intervening one or two days, with little opportunity to sleep. In the course of the experiment the men marched 125 kilometers over a partly swampy ground with the temperature of the air being about 41 F. The men slept on an average three and one-half hours in the course of the entire experiment. At the end of the fatigue exercise some of the men were given 20 mg. of benzedrine sulfate while others were given placebos (tablets that looked exactly like the benzedrine sulfate tablets but contained none of the drug). Two and one-half hours later both groups were made to run 5 kilometers. Compared with the record made by the two groups before they took the fatigue exercise, it took 20 seconds longer for those given placebos, and those taking the benzedrine sulfate ran the distance in 18 seconds less; that is 18 seconds faster than before they took the fatigue exercise.

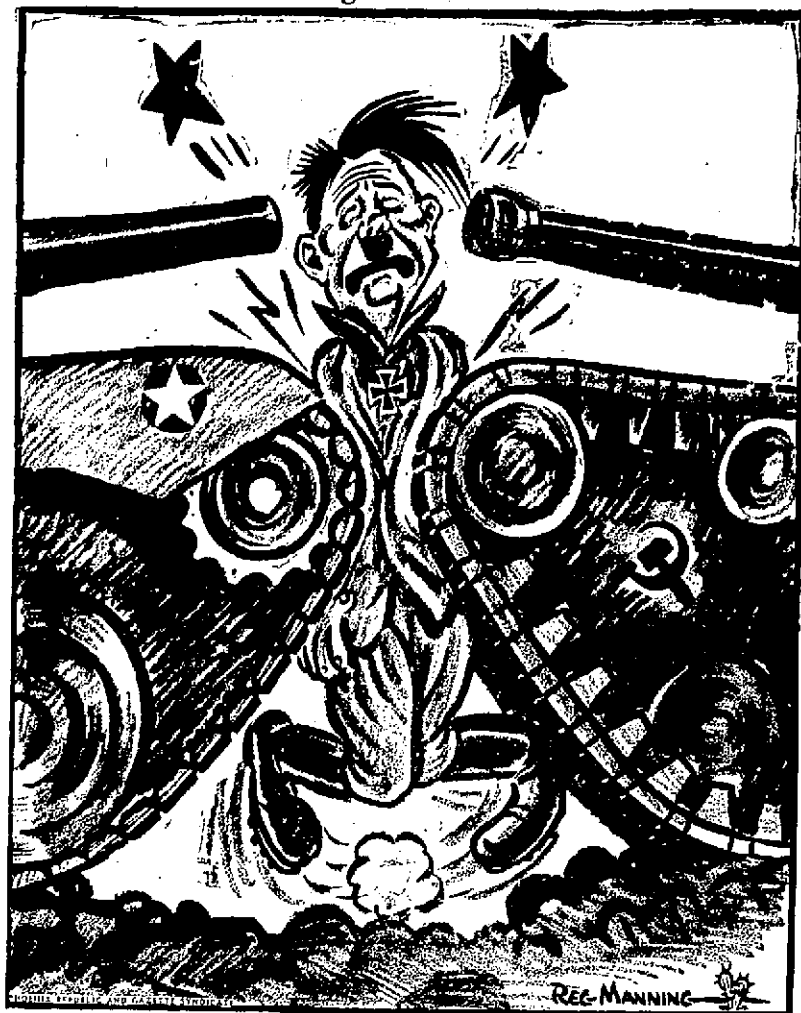

Another surprising fact was that this same dose of benzedrine sulfate, given after the fatigue period, improved the rapidity of reading accuracy, while in persons not fatigued the same dose had no effect on their ability for solving arithmetical problems. Fortunately this potent drug must be prescribed by a physician who can watch its effect upon each individual after one or two trial doses. There are some individuals who are allergic to it.

Neurosthenia—mental and physical tiredness—is very common these days. Send today for Dr. Barton's interesting booklet on this condition entitled "Neurosthenia." To obtain it send five cents, cash preferred, to cover cost of handling and mailing. Write to The King's Laboratory, c/o The Kingston Daily Freeman, Post Office Box 75, Station C, New York, N. Y.

needed implements are available even though a person may have to shop around a bit.

The necessity for a nation-wide victory garden program in 1945 was questioned by some a few months ago. That was before the big German push. Now there is no doubt. Spring is here, so spring from here—right into that garden!

Germany Is Collapsing Rapidly as Organized Resistance Crumbles; High Command Chooses Defeat in West
By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, April 12—Germany is folding up. The high command has evidently decided it is better to give up to the Americans, British, Canadian and French armies than to the Russians.

The long-hoped-for surrender by Germany is actually happening. It is being done not through any government but directly between military commanders. Organized resistance not only is crumbling but what will be regarded by military men in Germany as defeat with honor is being accomplished. It is, however, really an internal collapse rather than a military offensive.

It is clear that armored columns could not hope to penetrate as far as they have if any plan for organized resistance in front of Berlin had been made by the German commanders. The fact that the American armies are able to move as rapidly as they have been going in the last 24 hours is confirmation of a theory held for some time here that, when the final moments came, the Germans would choose the Anglo-American armies rather than the Red armies for the wind-up.

One of the government-controlled newspapers at Moscow has been proclaiming that the Allied armies which crossed the Rhine did not have any real opposition. This comment was intended to emphasize by contrast the Russian military achievement in the east. Nevertheless, the fact remains that the Russian armies have been held to within a few miles of Berlin while the Anglo-American armies have swept forward to gains that would not likely have been tried if supply systems were harassed by the enemy.

The German air force offers no opposition and the formation of any defense line east of the Rhine—which has been feared by some of our generals as likely to make the German prediction of a captured Berlin a reality—has not materialized. The prediction of a captured Berlin last week that the Americans could go on to Berlin without opposition has come true.

The obvious sometimes is difficult to accept especially in military operations where deception and hidden defense are always possible. But the more one looks back on the Hitler party's propaganda of intimidation, the more it is apparent that there was no means available for the German military men to arrange a surrender. Even if they desired to accept the terms of "unconditional surrender," they would have to bring about such a surrender directly to Russian as well as Anglo-American commanders. The possible risk of falling into Russian hands was not relished by some of the German commanders, especially those of the old school.

With Hitler ordering a "no surrender" policy on the one hand, and with Russia and the western Allies insisting on an organized surrender by some established authority on the other, the military leaders of Germany apparently began to figure out that piecemeal surrender offered the only hope of preventing disaster. The Germans have feared mistreatment of prisoners of war at the hands of Russian armies.

Whatever the plan, it is likely to have been broadcast to the people in the surrendered areas but doubtless was participated in by a few military chiefs. It might even not have been a concerted course. The fate of the Nazi party has, of course, not been settled. Only organized resistance is now coming to an end. The guerrilla warfare and underground fighting will be carried on very much as it was inside France by the French people after the defeat in 1940. Movement did not make its appearance promptly but gradually gained straight as the occupying armies of the Nazis inflicted their cruelties.

It may be that the underground will develop in the areas under Russian control and will seek sympathizers and recruits in the occupied areas. The test of Allied policies of control which are to be carried out by a commission sitting in Berlin will come toward the end of the year, and it is conceivable that fighting in Germany will be going on into 1946 by guerrilla bands.

Meanwhile, for all practical purposes, the war in Europe is ending. Occupation of Berlin by the Anglo-American armies seems a foregone conclusion after the juncture with the Russians is made. Plans for the administration of Berlin for Allied military forces have been made for some time. There will be representative military groups from each of the major Allies but for the next few months at least, the Anglo-American armies will have the major part of the German prisoners and population under their jurisdiction.

The drama of Europe is by no means over. There is southern Germany and Italy to clean up. But the bulk of the fighting may be finished before another month has gone by. For there is no reason why the German divisions in Italy should continue the struggle if their sources of supply are conquered. The transfer of our power to the Far East should begin in a matter of weeks.

Okinawa—(by Navy radio)—During our first afternoon on Okinawa my group of marines went about a mile and a half inland. Our vehicles were not ashore yet, so we had to pack on our backs everything we had.

Personally, I was overladen as usual. I had two canteens, a musette bag, a blanket rolled up in a poncho, three rubber life preservers, a shovel, and assorted knives, first aid kits, etc. Furthermore I had on two pairs of pants, was carrying two jackets, and it was hotter than hell.

The result of all this was that for the first time in my life I couldn't keep up. I hated to do it, but I had to sit down now and then to rest and let the others go ahead. (Moral: A lifetime of sin and crime finally catches up with you.)

Anyhow, we finally got where we were going. We stopped on a hillside, threw down our gear, connected our phones to wires on the ground, and were ready for business. That is, the others were. I lay down on the grass and rested for an hour.

After that we began getting ready for the night. We figured the Japs would bomb us all night, that their artillery would soon start up from the hills, and that when it got dark some sly infiltrators would start infiltration.

So we dug foxholes. The slope was so steep I chose a nice deep position at the foot of a small embankment that didn't require much digging.

Now we come to the life preservers. You may have wondered why I was carrying three life preservers on dry land. Well, I knew what I was doing all right.

I just blew up my three life preservers, spread them in the foxhole and I had the perfect Simmons you ever saw. We finally got onto that trick after a few invasions in Europe and I slept all last summer in France comfortably on three blown-up preservers.

And it was worth the trouble of carrying them just to see the reaction of the marines. They would come up to look at this strange device and stand there, staring, and then say:

"Well, I'll be damned. Why in the hell couldn't I have thought of that?"

Then we got out our K ration and my friend, Ray Reed Taylor, came and squatted Indian-fashion while I made hot coffee for us.

with some new heat tablets the marines had issued. By the time we finished it was almost dark. Everybody who wasn't on guard at the edge of our little camp, or who wasn't standing duty at the field telephones went to bed, for in Jap country you don't move around at night unless you have to.

Going to bed was merely a figure of speech for everybody except me. I seemed to be the only one who had brought a blanket and I definitely was the only one who had nice soft life preservers to sleep on.

The others slept on the ground in their foxholes with their ponchos wrapped around them. A poncho is wind and waterproof, but it has no warmth. In fact, it seems to draw all the warmth out of your body and transmit it into the air.

The day had been hot, but the night got mighty cold. And a very heavy dew came gradually, soaking everything. All the others practically froze and got very little sleep. But for once in my life, I was warm as a bug.

But I didn't sleep too much. There's always a flaw somewhere. My flaw was the mosquitoes. I've never been so tortured by mosquitoes as that first night on Okinawa.

They were persistent. They were tenacious. And they were the noisiest mosquitoes I've ever associated with. They were so noisy that when I pulled the blanket over the side of my face and covered my ears tight I could still hear them. That's really true.

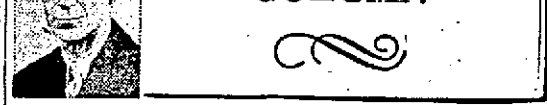

I dozed my face twice with the mosquito repellent which the marines had issued, but it did no good whatever. It was 11 o'clock when I finally got asleep. At 3 a.m. I awakened and knew something was wrong. What was wrong was my face.

My upper lip was swollen so that I thought I had a pimple on it. My face was so swollen the skin was stretched tight over it. And my left eye was nearly shut.

After that I just went under the blanket and decided to suffocate. That way I did sleep, but the next morning I was groggy and sloppy from sleeping so long without air.

These mosquitoes really got a scare into me. For they say Okinawa is malarial and I certainly got enough mosquito bites that night to make me believe that. So bright and early, while I made hot coffee for us, first time in my life.

were menaced. The Canadians launched a drive into western Holland against thousands of trapped Germans. Ninth and First Army divisions whittled down the Ruhr pocket and its garrisons of up to 100,000 German troops.

The First Army and at least parts of the Third were driving hard for Leipzig and a juncture with the Russians which would sever Germany. One unconfirmed report placed American tanks in the Halle area, 15 miles from Leipzig.

The Ninth Army, across the last river before Berlin, was about 115 miles from the Russians.

The Third Army reached the outskirts of Weimar, birthplace of the German republic, and captured Neustadt, eight miles north-east of Coburg and 43 from Czechoslovakia. Infantry following the tanks marched and rode to points 40 miles southwest of Leipzig and 35 west of Dresden.

Masked in Blackout

The full extent of the Third Army drive was masked in a security blackout. The Sixth Armored Division whipped 46 miles across central Germany yesterday and the Fourth (Breakthrough) Armored Division gained 25.

Heinrich Himmler, German Gestapo chief, issued a decree saying "every German town and every house must be defended."

Berlin said the Allies driving into the Ruhr pocket had captured Gotha, a great steel and coal producer of 303,288 inhabitants before the war. Nearby Essen fell yesterday. In the south, the Rainbow (42nd) Division captured Schweinfurt, ball bearing capital of the Reich, and moved to within 29 miles of the Nazi shrine city of Nuremberg.

Commerce Officer Will Hold Meeting

Newly-elected officers and directors of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce will hold their weekly meeting at 7:30 tonight in the Governor Clinton Hotel and discuss plans for the organization of 1,009 business, industrial and professional people to work for the betterment of Kingston and vicinity.

With a quota budget of $30,000, the Chamber of Commerce will elect 100 workers to act as the membership committee to enlist the support of a potential 1,009 businessmen.

Among the officials who take up their duties for the first time tonight are Al Reina, president; Louis Steketee, recording secretary, and Harry Ensign, treasurer.

Nazi Plane Toll 989 in Six Days
Berlin Is Raked by Allied Aircraft in Strong Night Raid

London, April 12 (AP)—German plane losses in the last six days mounted to 989 today when 11 American Thunderbolt pilots strafed two airfields near Leipzig where 350 gas-less aircraft were parked.

The Thunderbolt pilots attacked until their ammunition was exhausted and at the end counted 74 planes destroyed and 18 others damaged.

Allied planes raked Berlin with bombs again during the night, dealt punishing blows to German shipping and pressed their methodical program of reducing the enemy's aerial defenses.

Three times R.A.F. Mosquitos visited the beleaguered German capital and unloaded 2,000-pound block-busters, running up the total there to six raids in two nights and 56 in the last 49 days.

Five German merchant vessels were set afire late yesterday by Beaufighters and Mosquitos of the R.A.F. Coastal Command, continuing their stepped up attacks on enemy shipping off Norway.

for cowardice in surrendering the East Prussian capital and sentenced to death in Absentia.

"Reprisals will be taken against his family," the official German war bulletin added.

Forces Reach Danube

Berlin said Tolbukhin's forces had reached the Danube bend 42 miles west of Vienna and 12 miles west of St. Pien.

The Berlin radio said Soviet armor reached a point between Krems and Melk, 50 miles from Linz, 75 miles from Bavaria and little more than 115 miles from Berchtesgaden, mountaintop retreat of Adolf Hitler.

Fall of Vienna appeared to be only a matter of hours as mopping up of the last enemy resistance progressed rapidly inside the vital communications hub and second city of the Greater Reich.

Russian shock troops yesterday stormed across the Danube canal inside the capital, gaining control of half the nine-mile-long island between the canal and the river where the Nazis were making a final stand.

Nine-tenths of the major part of the city south of the Danube already was in Russian hands.

Northeast of the capital the Russians slashed one of the last German escape routes—a secondary railroad running north to Landsburg and the Czechoslovak city of Bruenn (Brynn).

Roney Will Contest Continues; Women Tell of Their Talks

The case for the proponents in the will contest of Lila James Roney continued in County Court this morning as two new witnesses swore that Mrs. Roney's conversations with them as late as 1944 had been completely rational. The witnesses were examined by George Kaufman, attorney for the executor, before County Judge John M. Cashin.

Mrs. William S. Elwyn of Woodstock and Mrs. John Shults, wife of the former supervisor of the town of Saugerties, each testified that in their most recent conversations with Mrs. Roney, she had been, to the best of their knowledge, rational.

The testimony of Mrs. Shults also touched upon the fact that Mrs. Roney had mentioned her brother George, the contestant, in one of these conversations.

The witness testified that Mrs. Roney had said that her brother took her car and wrecked it, that she had given him money and that she had always thought that her mother favored her brother.

However, Mrs. Shults stressed on the witness stand that the conversation with Mrs. Roney, whom she had known since they both were children, was completely rational.

After the cross-examination, the court recessed.

Weather Bureau looked for no real let up in the heat wave, fourth of the season, until the week-end.

Temperatures which shattered heat records in many communities yesterday probably would be equalled today, meteorologists said.

Buffalo set the record-breaking pace yesterday with an 86-degree reading that broke the all-time April record by two degrees and the date record by 20 degrees. A high of 83 was forecast for Buffalo today. The date record, established in 1896, is 75.

Other records yesterday included Rochester's 85, up 19 degrees; Syracuse's 82, up 7; Albany's 82, up 20, and Binghamton's 80, up 2.

The state's coastal areas remained unaffected with readings in the high 60's.

County Judge Says Delinquency Held Down in Ulster

Problem of Crime Is Not Increasing, Cashin Says; Tells of Work With Youth

"Juvenile delinquency is being held down in Ulster county," said Judge John M. Cashin in his office today, reviewing what Ulster county's youth movement has accomplished and suggesting further improvements.

"In spite of war conditions, my work in Children's Court shows that the problem of children's crime is definitely not increasing here, and that is something of which we can be really proud," the judge continued.

Judge Cashin, Ulster County's Children's Court judge, finds, however, that there is a distinct need for more recreational centers where children may be taken care of under supervision when the parks are closed.

"Actually, there are only three months at the most when there is supervised play," the judge pointed out. "I feel that giving the children a place to go, so that they won't be left on the streets, would be the key in the majority of cases I see." Here Judge Cashin stressed the need for additional play facilities, and suggested possible ways of expanding the youth movement in the county.

The county judge made a concrete suggestion that the recreational facilities of the public schools be made available to the students after school hours, and that some supervision be maintained so that they will be free to use the gymnasiums after class hours.

In reference to the proposed Youth Center which the city is sponsoring, Judge Cashin said he thinks that this would be a definite improvement, if administered properly.

The county judge made particular reference to the fine work being done in Kingston by many organizations to combat juvenile delinquency, and he attributed Ulster county's excellent record to this work. The judge praised particularly the work being done by the Y. M. C. A., which is responsible for taking care of many children.

In illustrating the sort of group work that is being planned, Judge Cashin mentioned the Kingston Athletic Association, formed last year with the idea of encouraging sports activities among the youth of Kingston.

"Although the association is still in an embryonic stage," the judge explained, "it is planning to see that teams are formed in the grammar schools, and will encourage competition between the different school teams. A track meet will be held in the stadium for the championship, and prizes will be awarded to the winners by the Athletic Association."

Included among the officers of the association are Supreme Court Justice Harry E. Schrick and County Judge Cashin.

"The kids like to see their elders take an interest in them; that's why we're doing this particular thing this way," the judge explained.

Ministers Sponsor Prayer Service For Peace Parley

The Ministers' Association of Kingston will sponsor a prayer service for the San Francisco Conference of the United Nations at 7:30 p. m., on Wednesday, April 25, at the First Baptist Church, 77 Albany avenue.

According to the Rev. R. Lewis Johnson, the Union Prayer service will seek God's help for the delegates at the conference.

The Rev. Raymond Pontier will deliver a brief meditation on the significance of the conference. Other members of the association taking part are the Reverends Frank L. Gollnick, president of the Ministers' Association, William C. Ardrey, Herbert Killander, William McVey and R. Lewis Johnson.

Protestant churches all over the nation are being asked to set aside the opening date of the San Francisco Conference as a special time for meditation.

In cooperation with the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the ministers will use as a guide for the service the booklet issued by the Federal Council.

"Our churches are profoundly concerned in the outcome of the San Francisco deliberations," the booklet states. "Basic conditions of human welfare and basic Christian purposes are at stake. We therefore join in urging our people to observe Wednesday, April 25, as an occasion for special intercession."

Mrs. Lester Decker will play the organ and Mrs. R. Lewis Johnson will sing the "Lord's Prayer," at the prayer service.

Special services for V-E Day are planned by the Federation of Men's Clubs in Kingston. Memorial services in the Broadway Theatre at 8:30 p. m. on V-E Day are

Questions Stettinius On Italy as Full Ally

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Congressional advocates of full Allied status for Italy called upon the State Department today to explain this country's diplomatic intentions toward the former Axis partner.

Rep. Marcantonio (A.P.-N.Y.), author of a congressional resolution requesting the president to proclaim Italy a United Nations ally, had a 3 p. m. (E.W.T.) appointment with Secretary of State Stettinius to discuss Allied plans for that country.

Italy now is recognized as a "co-belligerent"—a status which denies her Lend-Lease aid and does not permit her participation in the United Nations Conference at San Francisco.
